our mission

To make California the healthiest state in the country, and the state with the lowest rates of domestic violence by leveraging the power of community and collaboration to generate change moving california further forward defining collaboration at different stages

Adapted from The Tamarack Institute. Tool: The Collaboration Spectrum. July 2017.

what do we mean by “prevention”?

Indicated

Those who are at high risk for domestic or family violence. Focused on individual level treatment/services to prevent occurrence or recurrence of violence.

Selective

Those at higher-than-average risk for domestic or family violence. Focused on subgroups, identified by risk factors such as children exposed to domestic or family violence.

Universal

General population. Focused on deterring violence by cultivating positive norms, providing education/information and skills to support upstander behavior and safe relationships.

our overarching question

How can multi-sector collaboration help break the cycle of domestic violence?

Through this effort, together we will:

- Understand how collaboration can help us more effectively address complex issues like domestic violence;
- Know what it takes to convince other sectors to engage around an issue that is still often considered “private” but actually has a profound impact on multiple parts of a community; and
- Build a strong evidence base for collaboration as a promising approach to prevent domestic violence.
